

The IMPORTANCE of CHURCH LIFE

Church life has lost its significance with the advent of the ecumenical movement. Church life has become an appendix in many professing believers' lives. They attend church when they have time. Every earthly thing in their lives takes precedent. Children's studies, jobs, recreation and man's ambitions are all priorities except attending church.

Compounding the problem is the downgrading of church life from holiness to carnality. The awe-inspiring worship of God in the past has been rejected and replaced by carnal entertainment masquerading as the worship of God. Man-centred songs are sung in churches to scratch itchy ears. Churches are located worldwide, allowing professing believers to choose what they like and dislike about a church, like a buffet spread. Convenience is the most crucial criterion in choosing a church. Biblical doctrines are cast aside as unwanted newspapers, replaced by friendships and relationships. The result is that the importance of church life is not important.

Is this your sentiment? God ordained the institution of the church! How can it not be important to God's children if it has been ordained and sanctioned by their heavenly Father? If it is not essential to the Christian's spiritual well-being, why has Satan not stopped attacking it, from within and without?
